DOC, I GOTTA GET UP AND GET GOIN'!
YOU LIE STILL, BOY... YOU'RE VERY SICK.

BUT, DOC, THIS STUFF ABOUT POSSES HAS ME WORRIED!

WAIT! SOMEBODY OUTSIDE!

JESSE, THERE'S FIVE MEN WITH GUNS OUTSIDE. YOU LIE STILL! I'LL GO AND GET RID OF THEM. DOC, IT'S MY TROUBLE. YOU STAY OUT!

BUT A MOMENT LATER...

NO USE STALLIN', DOC... WE'RE GIVING YA THREE MINUTES T' BRING JESSE OUT... THEN WE'RE COMIN' IN!!

GENTLEMEN, NONE OF THE MEN WHO ROBBED THE BANK ARE IN HERE... NOW GET OFF MY PROPERTY!!

I'M GONNA GIVE THESE BRAVE MANHUNTERS THE SURPRISE OF THEIR SHORT LIVES!

I TOLD YOU IT WAS MY FIGHT, DOC... AND I'LL HANDLE IT MYSELF!!

KIT CARSON'S INDIAN ADVENTURES

Christopher Carson was born in Kentucky, but when he was scarcely a year old his parents took him to Missouri, settling on the frontier of civilization. There young Kit (as he was later called) passed his boyhood—close to the trails where he could see the long trains of pack-mules go swinging by.

In 1826, when Kit was seventeen, a man named Colonel St. Vrain decided to head an expedition of twenty-six wagons and forty-two men, all trappers, to the far-off Rocky Mountains. Kit, young and small for his age, although inexperienced was permitted to join the expedition because of his reputation as an expert marksman and a young man who feared nothing.

For weeks the loaded wagons rumbled along the Trail, with no sign of Indians. Finally they came to the crossing of Walnut Creek which was a well known danger spot. The campers selected this as a camping-place and the caravan halted. They quickly unhitched the mules and oxen and soon prepared their evening meal of buffalo tongue. All the men were talking and leisurely enjoying their food, when from the rear came a great commotion.

"Indians!" shouted one of the men, leaping to his feet as six Pawnee Indians, mounted on swift ponies, rushed out of the tall grass, where they had been hiding. They rode wildly, yelling and swinging buffalo robes, in an attempt to stampede the mules.

The men quickly reached for their guns and a fusillade of shots rang out. The Pawnees heard the shots, whirled their ponies about, and disappeared into the hills.

The following morning the trappers moved on—and the next evening their camping ground was at Pawnee Rock, known to be one of the most hazardous camping grounds on the trail.

The men were expecting a surprise attack, so they arranged their wagons into a corral into which the animals could be driven. When it grew dark, sentinels were posted to give the alarm at the first sight of a Pawnee Indian. Kit Carson was chosen to be one of the guards, and with tense excitement, he stood at his post.

The forty-two tired men were sound asleep, their rifles beside them, when they heard a cry, "Indians!"

The men leaped to their feet and reached for their guns as a rifle shot rang out. A moment later, Kit came rushing into the corral breathless—"Indians!" he cried, "I killed one! I saw him fall!"

The trappers steeled themselves in the grim darkness for the onrush of the Pawnees. The stars shone brightly in the sky, although there was no moon that night—but silhouettes could easily be seen in the distance. They waited breathlessly, but no Pawnees appeared. At last, exhausted, the men went back to sleep, certain that it had been a false alarm, although Kit insisted he had seen an Indian and had killed him.

Once more the sentinels took up their vigil. It was a long and weary night for young Carson. Every rustle in the grass, every distant sound, every noise of a night insect seemed to young Kit to be a creeping Pawnee.

At last daylight arrived and the men all gathered around to see Kit's dead Indian.

There lying face down in the grass, was no black Pawnee Indian but Carson's mule, shot through the head. Kit was heart-broken at the loss, and also because he had frightened the men. He told them how sorry he was. The men expressed their grief at the loss of Kit's mule as they hastened away to breakfast.

While the trappers were eagerly engaged in eating their breakfast they heard an alarm, and before they could reach for their guns, a large band of Pawnee Indians were rushing upon them. The mules were quickly driven into the corral and the men leaped to their feet to fire.

The Pawnees raced by, pouring out a shower of arrows and gunshot, while their shrill and terrifying war-whoops could be heard for miles. They wheeled their ponies and back they came, with another onslaught of arrows and bullets, swiftly escaping beyond the trappers' guns.

For three days and three nights this brave little band of white men kept fighting off the Pawnees. The mules were in torment from hunger and thirst, having been three days without water.

St. Vrain ordered the trappers to hitch up and fight their way through. He said the darkness would help them cross Pawnee Fork. The men did as they were told and reached the stream without losing a man or an animal. At the stream the mules became unmanageable and the wagons had no time to form a caravan. When they reached the other bank they found the Pawnee Indians lying in wait for them.

"Let's charge!" cried St. Vrain, dashing forward.

Kit Carson and all the other men were mounted and followed their leader, dashing into the very midst of the Pawnee Indians and firing as they advanced. The Pawnees, taken aback by this sudden display of courage, held a hasty pow-wow, fell back, and turned and fled over the prairie. The caravan, without any more trouble, followed the winding trail along the Arkansas to Bent's Fort.

Kit was engaged as hunter for Bent's Fort, and once he and six other men went out for a few days after buffalo. They had little luck and decided to return to the fort the following day. While lying in their camp not far from the trail, they were awakened by the cry of howling wolves in the distance, and their dogs began to bark and growl. They found two wolves sneaking about. They raised their guns, aimed to fire, when to their surprise one wolfskin fell off, and there was a Redskin Indian!

"I had a sneaking idea that those wolves might be Indians! Let's tie them to this tree and hold them till morning!"

After tying the Indians they went back to their buffalo-robe beds, and feeling secure went to sleep. While they were sleeping a band of Sioux Indians crept up. The two "wolves" were scouts sent to learn the strength and size of camp, after they were captured they signalled to their band in their wolf-call.

A fusillade of shots from the Sioux Indians woke the hunters. One of the hunters was killed with five shots in his body and eight in his buffalo robe. The five other men could easily have been killed but for the quick-witted Kit, who fired shot after shot into the body of the leader of the Sioux. Ten Sioux were killed and they ran off into the woods after their surprise attack.

Another summer day Kit Carson and his friend Gabe Bridger set out for Green River. They were eager to take part in those famous meetings they had heard so much about.

They started out and soon met other trappers who worked for other companies, all dressed in their buckskins and coonskin caps. With some of them were their squaws they had acquired as wives and a crowd of half-breed children. Some of the Indians who had horses or furs to trade or sell came flocking in.

For weeks they sold their wares and spent their money to whoop it up, returning to the trail with pockets as empty as when they came but without their furs. The money belonged again to the company, that had paid them.

When the Rendezvous was over, Kit joined a band of fifty trappers bound for the country of the Blackfeet Indians. He and his men knew into what dangerous country they were entering but danger was the spice with which they salted their daily life.

Kit and his friends Bill Williams led the way. Suddenly Kit drew up his horse, for there in the distance was a pack of Blackfeet Indians—"Tigers of the Plains," cried Kit.

"Men, hide yourselves behind those rocks!" called Kit. "Don't blow your ammunition away to no account. We haven't got more'n a dozen rounds apiece."

The Indians raised their rifles, and yelled like a horde of savages. They galloped through the camp, killing ten of the trappers. Then they commenced an orderly retreat, keeping up a rain of arrows as they did so. It did not take the Indians long to figure out that Kit and his men were short of ammunition. They re-formed their lines and with hideous yells came helter skelter down the hillside straight into the makeshift fortress of the trappers, hell-bent for leather.

The zing of arrows. . . the crack of tomahawks on skulls. . . the groans of humans in mortal combat. . . it was a real fight and the first hand-to-hand fighting Kit had experienced.

The Blackfeet would not give up. They came swooping down on Kit and his men with war whoops.

"Take extra careful aim with each shot," Kit cautioned, "we have to make every shot count." "What'll we do when that's all blazed away?" someone asked. "Give 'em Green River!" Bridges bellowed and the rest of the men took up the cry.

The Blackfeet kept up the attack. While some of them were firing on the trappers, the rest of the tribe set fire to the surrounding brush.

"We're goners," cried Bill Williams. The smoke filled their lungs and made their eyes smart, they could hardly see as they coughed and choked, fighting for their very breath.

"Let's give 'em Green River, I don't hanker to burn" cried one of the men.

"Stay where you are!" Carson's command rang out. The rolls of smoke were almost unendurable. The flames were crackling slower now and Kit's men could feel the heat. But strangely enough it grew no hotter.

"We've won men!" Kit's cry of triumph rang out. "The brush is too green to burn."

The fire died out and the smoke cleared away as the men gratefully drew in gulps of fresh air. The Indians seeing they were defeated, grew tired of their futile battle and withdrew.

Kit called his men together and said "The day of the Indian is about done. Indians have to make way for civilization. And we are breaking the trails for that march right now."

When John Charles Fremont was commissioned by the United States Government to charter the Oregon Trail through South Pass, he took Kit Carson along as guide. Together they explored a southerly route leading through California, hoping that some day the United States would extend from ocean to ocean.

His dreams came true. It's the vision and courage of men like Kit Carson who have helped unite our United States of America. To these brave men of battle go our everlasting thanks.

You Practice SERVICING with Kits I Send You

Nothing takes the place of PRACTICAL EXPERIENCE. That's why NRI training is based on LEARNING BY DOING. You use parts I send to build many circuits common to Radio and Television. With my Servicing Course you build the modern Radio shown at left. You build a Multimeter and use it to help make $10, $15 a week fixing sets in spare time while training. All equipment is yours to keep. Coupon below will bring book of important facts. It shows other equipment you build.

You Practice BROADCASTING with Kits I Send You

As part of my Communications Course I send you parts to build low-power Broadcasting Transmitter at left. Use it to get practical experience. You put this station "on the air" . . . perform procedures demanded of broadcasting station operators. An FCC Commercial Operator's License can be your ticket to a bright future. My Communications Course trains you to get your license. Mail coupon. Book shows other equipment you build for practical experience.

I Will Train You at Home in Spare Time to be a RADIO-TELEVISION Technician

TELEVISION

Making Jobs, Prosperity

25 million homes have Television sets now. Thousands more sold every week. Trained men needed to make, install, service TV sets. About 200 television stations on the air. Hundreds more being built. Good job opportunities here for qualified technicians, operators, etc.

America's Fast Growing Industry Offers You Good Pay, Success

Training PLUS opportunity is the PERFECT COMBINATION for job security, advancement. When times are good, the trained man makes the BETTER PAY, gets PROMOTED. When jobs are scarce, the trained man enjoys GREATER SECURITY. NRI training can help assure you and your family more of the better things of life. Radio is bigger than ever with over 3,000 broadcasting stations and more than 115 MILLION sets in use, and Television is moving ahead fast.

N.R.I. Training Leads to Good Jobs Like These

I TRAINED THESE MEN

"Am transmitter-studio operator at KPAT. Most important day of my life was when I enrolled with NRI."—Elmer Frewaldt, Madison, S. Dakota.

"Made my first $100 from spare time work before I finished my course. Now I average better than $10 a week, spare time."—Frank Rorer, Lorain, Ohio.

"I've come a long way in Radio and Television since graduating. Have my own business on Main Street."—Joe Travers, Asbury Park, New Jersey.

"I didn't know a thing about Radio. Now have a good job as Studio Engineer at KMMJ."—Bill Delzell, Central City, Nebraska.
